Nobody can build a great business alone, and whether it's a start-up or an established industry leader, having access to high-quality advice can enhance the organizations odd of success. Entities seeking advice can obtain it from a board of directors, consultants or networks. However, increasing attention is being given to corporate governance advisory boards.

Customer or Competitor Issues:

A corporate governance advisory board can help alleviate customer or competitor issues that could arise for a board of directors. There are many sensitivities involved in being honest about your business before a board of directors especially when that board also includes customers. The issue can arise in the context of the customer versus enterprise, but it can also surface as one that is in between the customers if they are on the board.

Commitment:

Dealing with corporate governance advisory boards may be less time-consuming than dealing with a board of directors. A typical corporate governance advisory board will meet only once or twice in a year and the meetings will also be shorter, as the range of issues Cheap Indianapolis Colts Jerseys , it deals with may be narrower than the range before the board of directors. The issue of advisory board compensation is addressed further. It is said that this compensation will almost always be substantially lower than those required for corporate directors in any event. However, if the desired benefit is to be obtained from an advisory board, the enterprise is well served by considering the nature of the investment that must be made in terms of time, organization and cost.

Focus:

A board of directors has the most supervisory responsibility for all affairs of the enterprise. An advisory committee can have such broad focus or a narrower one that focuses only on a specific product feature. It is important to determine what the focus of the committee should be.

Size:

A corporate governance advisory board must be the right size. Like a board of directors, a corporate governance advisory board should be built carefully, having regard to the current and nearer-term needs of the enterprise. A board with extra members will provide challenges in terms of delivering the ongoing information required to enable the board to be effective and in terms of organizing board meetings. It will be best to begin with the corporate governance advisory board leader and to grow the board from a small size to a large number. This can be done over time .
